

Business Learns From Cash Crisis

NEW YORK (AP) — The liquidity crisis may have dealt a massive blow to waste and inefficiency in American business. Certainly it has knocked sense into businessmen who learned some bad habits during the 1960s.

This is one of the beneficial effects of the deliberate shrinkage of the money supply to the American economy, and thus may represent a victory for the Federal Reserve and the slow-down program of the Nixon administration.

Still to be determined during the next few weeks is whether the result was achieved at too great a cost. Many companies are hard pressed for ready cash, and some may be dangerously short of liquid capital.

During the 1960s the logic of many companies involved a trilogy:

The way to earnings was to acquire other companies; the way to acquire other companies was to boost the company's price per share; the way to boost the share price was through earnings; the way to earnings...

Once this formula was successfully launched it fed on itself. Acquisitions were made feverishly. Companies acquired reputations as swingers and growers, giving an extra boost to their stock. Speculators supplied bundles of money.

A lot of commercial paper—corporate promissory notes—was issued to aid in these acquisitions. Debt ran high for many companies, a fact that often was overlooked. Money was easy. Many companies overextended themselves.

Now money is hard to get. The Penn Central Transportation Co., one of the largest corporate entities in the world, can't pay bills. Everyone is now taking a harder look at commercial paper. And they're not inclined to buy it.

This is one of the biggest results of the liquidity crisis: A return to conservatism in measuring credit-worthiness. Lenders want more assurance of repayment; they are demanding that business clean up its house.

Argus Research, one of the biggest suppliers of research to the investment community, summarizes the trend this way:

“Companies with mini-skirted balance sheets find themselves overexposed in the eyes of an investment community that has suddenly begun to apply neo-Victorian standards of financial prudence.”

Economic power, Argus says, has been returned to bankers and lenders. As a result, “Business managements across the country will become much more conservative in approving expansion projects and tougher about cutting costs.”

The trend is already clear. The big conglomerates are inactive. The depressed stock market has halted many acquisition programs because a depressed stock simply cannot buy as much as an inflated stock.

Moreover, some companies that hastily acquired subsidiaries during the 1960s are now trying to dispose of them. Capital spending plans also are being lowered. And many corporations are embarked on efficiency programs.

Welfare Hike Took Planning

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller said Wednesday night that careful planning by his administration and Welfare Commissioner Len Blaylock allowed the recent increase in welfare grants.

The governor also pointed out that the raise was accomplished without an increase in taxes.

Blaylock announced Tuesday that welfare recipients would receive a $6-a-month raise beginning Sept. 1.

Rockefeller spoke at the opening of his regional campaign headquarters at Russellville. He announced that Blaylock of Russellville would coordinate the governor's bid for a third term in Pope, Yell, Conway, Johnson and Perry counties.

The governor said that Arkansas has the lowest number of state employees in the nation.

120 Air Missions to Cambodia

By FRED HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Air Force planes have flown more than 120 bombing sorties against targets in Cambodia since American troops were withdrawn back into South Vietnam last week, sources say.

This is a drastic cutback from the level of air attacks mounted in May and June while American and South Vietnamese infantrymen were scouring enemy base areas in Cambodia.

U.S. officials have said American warplanes will continue hitting enemy supplies and reinforcement routes through Cambodia, but will not provide direct air support for Cambodian troops except as a side effect of the interdiction bombings.

Sources said in the first seven days after the American troop withdrawal, U.S. fighter bombers flew nearly 100 sorties and big B-52's flew more than 20 against targets in Cambodia.

A sortie is one flight by one plane.

During the past week, American reconnaissance planes made nearly 90 flights over Cambodian territory, attempting to keep track of movements of enemy war material and soldiers.

By contrast, U.S. fighter-bombers and B-52's made more than 5,400 individual attacks during May while photo planes were out on almost 800 sorties in that first month of the drive into Cambodia.

Air activity slackened considerably in June as the operation neared its end. There were about 3,600 attack sorties and more than 400 reconnaissance flights over Cambodia last month.

Information on how many of the 120 bombing sorties in the last week may have involved some air support for Cambodian forces was not available here.

White House officials have acknowledged it occasionally will be difficult to draw a sharp distinction between the interdiction and direct air support missions.

Since the base areas were invaded, the North Vietnamese have developed two main supply lines, one using primarily rivers and the other a truck route well to the west of the old sanctuary region.

Because of a new move by North Vietnam to create a supply complex in southern Laos, some defense authorities are forecasting intensification of U.S. air strikes against that region.

Production Credit Men Meet

A Production Credit Conference was held at Stouffville Riverfront Inn in St. Louis June 29-30, 1970 for all male field staff of the Production Credit associations in the three-state area of Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas. The field staff includes managers, assistant managers, branch managers, administrative assistants and field representatives.

The purpose of the conference was to furnish educational tools and techniques necessary to provide agricultural credit to farmers.

T. R. McGuire, President of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis, addressed himself to several issues. At the closing banquet, he stated: "On June 1, 1970 we reached the peak outstanding balance that was reached in 1969 two and one-half months earlier than was anticipated. The outstanding balance at the present time is $489 million. We expected to reach a peak in August of this year in excess of $515 million."

"The demand for credit by farmers is still growing at a rapid pace. Sources of credit where farmers can get the full amount they need to manage their farms is becoming harder and harder to find. The Production Credit Associations are one of the few places left today where a farmer can go to get all his short- and intermediate-term credit," Mr. McGuire continued.

Compton Has to Catch Public Eye

By ROBERT SHAW
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — "I'm somewhere between the favorite and the longest shot—those are the prepost odds and they haven't changed," says Robert C. (Bob) Compton.

Compton has been running for governor since the day he turned 40 in March 1969, but does not think the majority of the voters know yet who he is.

"I've got hopes I can catch the imagination of the Arkansas public," he said in an interview. "If I do, I can win."

"I have hopes a man can be elected governor of this state just simply by taking an honest position on honest issues rather than taking a political position on manufactured issues."

A lack of money has handicapped him in his appeal for votes, he said.

Compton, an El Dorado lawyer, says he is running a "scrambling" campaign — "I'm underfinanced and underorganized."

He opened his campaign headquarters in El Dorado Tuesday. He does not plan a Little Rock headquarters, a luxury he said he could not afford, and will operate out of Little Rock from his aunt's apartment.

Compton said he had built a campaign organization in some of the larger counties, but that he did not have enough.

"I think that by the primary the people will know pretty well who I am," he said. "I'm going to have enough to say about substantive issues, and not just rhetoric, that it will be reported to the extent that, whether I am agreed with, at least I will have been heard ..."

"I've got to be bold enough, fresh enough and audacious enough to get my message to the people. I won't be able to do it by a highly financed advertising campaign."

He said he might restor to borrowing a friend's pickup truck and another friend's loudspeaker system to gather crowds throughout Arkansas.

Compton said the large number of candidates in the Democratic primary — eight would make it difficult for the voters to choose, but he said that at this stage former Gov. Orval E. Faubus would have to be the man to beat because of Faubus' six previous winning campaigns.

"I find throughout the state a large number of people who are looking and listening for a candidate they can trust and in which they can have confidence," Compton said.

As a result, the determining factor is going to be the overall image projected by the candidate—his public appearance, what he does, whether the voters feel this candidate is the best man for the job at the present time."

C-5, Largest Plane, on Pacific Test

By DAVID BRISCOE

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — A C5 Galaxy lumbered down out of the sky here today, glided along the runway on 28 "roller skate" wheels and got a cheering brass band welcome.

The C5, which military spokesmen say is "without doubt the largest plane in the world," is on its maiden flight across the Pacific.

"It's a swell airplane," said its pilot, Maj. E. A. Chambers, based at Charleston, S.C. "She's the greatest, the easiest thing in the world to fly."

It was the first landing of a C5 at a foreign U.S. base. It had stopped at Hawaii and Guam on its way from Charleston Air Force base.

It made this trip so ground crews at Clark could learn about and train with the plane. Air Force officials did not say how long it would remain here.

When the C5 is on the ground its pilot still sits 32 feet up in the cockpit in an air-conditioned cabin.

Below the cabin, the cargo hold is 13-feet high, 19-feet wide and 144-feet long.

House Doves Protest Action on Cambodia

By ROBERT A. HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House antiwar forces were defeated today in their first test vote on the Senate's Cooper-Church amendment which seeks to clamp limits on presidential action in Cambodia.

The action came in tabling a motion which would have instructed the House members of a Senate-House conference committee, in advance to accept the restrictions voted by the Senate after nearly two months of debate.

The vote was preceded by charges from Democrats that pressure-type phone calls had been received by some congressmen from employees of the Housing and Urban Development Department linking inquiries about local projects to prospective votes on the Cooper-Church issue.

"There isn't any question that the President is doing everything he can to vindicate the disastrous showing in the other body (Senate)," said Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., who said two others told him about receiving the calls.

"So what's new now," replied House GOP Whip Leslie C. Arends of Illinois. "We've been through the same experience before whichever party is in power." Arends said he had received calls of the same type during the administrations of John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Even before debate on the Cooper-Church amendment was under way, House doves lodged a complaint against the short notice given members on today's planned action.

The Cooper-Church amendment is attached to the foreign military sales bill which was passed by the Senate last month. Under plans outlined Wednesday, the first test of House sentiment hinged on a move by Chairman Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., of the Foreign Affairs Committee to send the bill to a conference committee.

After a motion to instruct House conferees to accept the language of the Cooper-Church proposal, the strategy called for Morgan to move to table, or kill, that motion.

It was after 6:30 p.m. Wednesday when Democratic leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma announced the effort to send the bill to a conference with the Senate.

Albert's announcement followed a meeting of House strategists in the office of Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass. Bryce Harlow, counselor to President Nixon, reportedly attended the session.

Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., a leading dove, complained that more notice should be given on an issue of such importance.

President Nixon has said he would like the Senate-House conference committee to modify the Cooper-Church amendment. He emphasized the recognition of his constitutional duty to protect U.S. troops and authority to pay Asian nations, such as Thailand, to send troops and advisers to Cambodia.

Morgan and other likely House conferees on the bill want to go uninstructed to the conference with their Senate counterparts on the Foreign Relations Commission. The House members involved are opposed to Cooper-Church which is solidly supported by the senators.

House members involved in the conference also say the military sales bill should be continued, while the senators don't like the program through which U.S. weapons and other military equipment are sold to foreign nations.

The House people expect a long bargaining session with the Senate and one member said, "It may get acrimonious before it's over."

The Cooper-Church amendment, with an effective date of July 1, would bar the president from spending any funds without congressional consent for retaining U.S. forces in Cambodia, sending military advisers to instruct Cambodian forces, providing air combat support to Cambodian forces, or financing others "to engage in any combat activity in support of Cambodian forces."

Nixon Would Liberate Indians

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Exploring the plight of the American Indian, President Nixon told Congress today it is time "for a new era in which the Indian future is determined by Indian acts and Indian decisions."

In a special message, Nixon said he was proposing legislation that would empower Indian tribes or tribal groups to take over control and operation of federally financed program for their benefit—programs now operated by government employees.

He also proposed that "every Indian community wishing to do so should be able to control its own Indian schools" by setting up school boards like those in other communities.

Injury to Visiting Children

When youthful visitors come to your home, the rules of etiquette demand that you treat them with hospitality.

But the rules of law demand something more: that you also treat them with reasonable regard for their safety. If you do not, you may be held legally liable in the event of an injury.

Consider this case: Friends of the Webster family, including two small boys, came over for a Sunday visit. To please the children, Webster began playfully tossing the older brother into the air and catching him.

The first few times, all went well. But Webster failed to keep an eye on the younger boy, only two years of age, who kept edging up close to the action. Finally, on one catch, his elbow struck the little onlooker, inflicting a painful injury.

Was Webster legally liable for the accident? A court ruled that he was indeed. The court said that in view of the tender age of the victim, Webster should have been on the lookout for exactly this kind of an accident.

Liability may arise not only from negligent conduct but also from some faulty condition of the premises. In another case, a family lived in a second floor flat which was reachable by a back stairway. These back steps were so flimsy that the parents forbade their own seven-year-old daughter to use them.

However, they gave no such warning to the three-year-old daughter of a neighbor. This child, climbing the steps one morning for a visit, fell through an opening and was injured. Again, the host parents were held liable. The court said that, at the very least, they were bound to show as much concern for their guest as they showed for their own child.

On the other hand, some accidents are truly accidents—no one's fault at all. In another case, a visiting toddler lost his balance and fell down, striking his head against a small patch of cement near the driveway.

Could the homeowner be held liable, on the theory that his premises were in dangerous condition? A court said no. It was asking too much, said the court, to expect him to foresee danger in a bit of cement.

WR With Nixon, Asks Summer Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller was to meet today with President Nixon at the White House to discuss increasing summer job opportunity for Arkansas youth.

Rockefeller flew to Washington Wednesday night after opening his regional headquarters at Russellville to meet with the President.

The governor's appointment this morning at the White House was not announced in advance.

William G. Conley, Rockefeller's press aide, said the governor flew to Washington primarily to talk with Nixon about increasing the number of summer jobs for youth. It was announced Wednesday that the U.S. Labor Department had assigned more than 1,500 Neighborhood Youth Corps program in Arkansas.

Conley said Rockefeller also wanted to talk to the President about the farm bill pending in Congress. Rockefeller had expressed displeasure about the proposal saying that it was "short-sided" and had said that he hoped that a realistic compromise on the measure would be reached.

Conley also said the governor also might bring up a discussion of increasing the rice allotment. The rice allotment had been cut earlier by the Agriculture Department.

Stranded U.S. Students Coming Home

By TOM DEL VECCHIO
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The first batch of 3,500 American students after being temporarily stranded by the financial collapse of the travel agency that arranged their study tours.

"It was bedlam" when the students heard their trips had been cut short, said Debbie Monk, 16, of Newport News, Va.

She was among 183 persons emergency airlifted from Switzerland Tuesday to Kennedy Airport.

"Most of the students raised the money for the trip themselves," said Sister Celeste Marie Reichert of St. Edmund's High School, Brooklyn, chaperone to 13 girls from that school.

The cost for the four weeks abroad was $1,200 up.

On Monday, World Academy, Inc., which arranged the trips, filed bankruptcy petitions in Cincinnati's U.S. District Court. Four of its subsidiaries also filed petitions.

The firm's financial collapse left no funds for further feeding or accommodations for the students, but their flights home had been paid for in advance with a charter airline company.

"We were supposed to tour seven countries, but we only saw Italy and Switzerland," said Miss Monk. "We left on June 25 and were supposed to return Aug. 2."

Sister Grace Vincent, of Ladychiff College, Highland Falls, N.Y., said some of the 10 students she escorted had worked for two summers to pay for the trip.

"I really think the government should make an investigation," she said.

Another member of the group, Steven Baines, 16, of Newport News, said, "I'm kind of mad because I don't think we can get our money back."

Groups were caught in France, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Yugoslavia, Greece and Germany.

Earlier in the day, as another group boarded buses for Le Bourget Airport in Paris and the trip home, blond Candy Meek, 18, of Firebaugh, Calif. had tears in her eyes.

"I've worked practically all my life in my parents' shoe store to save for this trip," she said. "I wonder if I'll be able to come again."

Television and Radio

By JERRY BUCK

AP Television-Radio Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Lloyd Bridges almost blushed when I reminded him of the time 25 years ago when he played a secret agent in the movie serials.

He laughed and his heavy brows almost hid his small, deep blue eyes, and tiny crinkles radiated across his sun-redened face. It was hard to tell if he added any extra color.

I told him that his name had stuck in my mind since seeing that serial as a child. He shook his head ruefully and said, "I'd hoped everyone had forgotten that one. We did 13 episodes in about 30 days. That was the most confusing thing I ever did. We'd be in one spot and we'd do scenes for four or five different episodes at a time."

After a sluggish period during which he played a succession of gun slingers and psychotic killers in the movies, Bridges is now one of the actors most in demand for television movies.

He made three TV movies last season, including "Silent Night, Lonely Night," and will be back in at least three this year. In addition, he is getting ready to star in his fourth television series.

"San Francisco International," in which Bridges plays an airport manager, will be a part of the "Four in One" series on NBC Wednesday nights.

Asked to describe the role, he answered: "It's a kind of Burt Lancaster part." He burst out laughing, possibly at the thought of touching a sensitive nerve at Universal Studios. Lancaster plays a manager in "Airport," also produced by Universal.

He added, "He indulges in things like business and sex. He has an 18-year-old daughter. We talked about having a 16-year-old daughter and my own daughter, Cindy, could play it. They decided she should be a little older and could have her own pad and more effectively represent a youthful viewpoint."

Bridges said he is not encouraging Cindy to take up acting, as he did his sons Beau and Jeff. "It's hard for an actress to be happy. Too many lose their femininity."

Beau shot to stardom quickly in "Gaily, Gaily" and "The Landlord," and Jeff is just back from filming "The Yen and the Yang."

GIRLS' BIGGEST PROBLEM: FATHERS?

Dear Helen:

I am 16 and have the same problem as many other girls: My father. Today we had another fight. He called me vulgar names and thinks I'm a tramp because I like to go downtown every day. In this town, that's not going very far!

He reads wild stories in bad magazines about high school sex clubs, etc. and thinks all kids are maniacs. When he tells me to read and see for myself, I won't because this doesn't apply to me. That makes him madder. You see, my brother got in trouble. He figures I will, too.

We are constantly arguing about my friends, where and what they do. They're a bunch of normal clean-cut Americans.

Dad has the idea that he doesn't count—that he just pays the bills and Mom runs the rest. This because she takes my side once in a while when he goes on a rampage. These fights are tearing all of us apart.

Please don't ignore this as just another soggy letter from another unhappy teen-aged girl. Maybe I'm "lucky" because I get almost everything money can buy, but please tell me, how much does love cost? —NADINE

RARE COIN

LONDON (AP) — A silver minim, one of the world's rarest coins, has been identified at London's Guildhall Museum. Excavated at Chichester, it was issued during the reign of a British king before the Roman invasion of A.D. 43 and measures only a quarter of an inch across.

more than he can manage because he pays for it with FEAR. He is a frightened, insecure, terribly worried man who won't let himself trust—because he might be hurt again.

Teens can't cure problems by fighting them, for rebellion only strengthens their suspicions. But they CAN change the situation (if it isn't too far advanced) with "UN-THINK." That means reversing those built-up attitudes that make you see spite and hate in all your father's actions. When you can understand that his "meanness" is really misplaced caring, you're on your way towards solving the problem.

Choose a time when things are comparatively quiet at your house and just start talking. You may be surprised at the result as Patty, whose letter follows:

Dear Helen:

Thank you so much for your advice. It really helped. My father and I are on the happy road to better understanding of each other. You were right: A person has to go more than half way. You can't wait for him to make the first good move—because he hasn't "unthought" yet.

So I went in there and bearded the lion when he wasn't roaring. We sat down and had a long talk. It was a bit heated at first, but it grew progressively better. Now we are both learning to control our hot Irish tempers.

I never realized my father was afraid for me. I really thought he was restricting me just for the sake of doing it. He said he never realized what he was doing. I guess both of us had gotten in kind of a rut. We were reacting the way each of us expected the other to act, and getting worse all the time. Our generation gap is finally being closed: not completely, but it's on its way. Dad and I can talk things out now. We even joke together, and laugh at ourselves. Again, thanks!!! —PATTY

NOTE TO OTHER TEENS WITH PROBLEM PARENTS:

Be sure you choose the RIGHT time for that talk. Never try it when one or the other of you is smoldering from a recent hurt. —H.

All-Star to Be Tuesday, Cincinnati

By HAROLD HARRISON
CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati has been good to National League teams in their competition with the American League in the mid-summer All-Star games.

The game to be played here next Tuesday in the Cincinnati Reds' new $41-million Riverfront Stadium will be the third such All-Star classic to be played in the city.

The National League won both previous contests—4-1 in 1938 and 5-1 in 1953.

And the National League probably will be rated as favorites in Tuesday's classic.

They haven't lost to the American League since 1962 and now lead 22-17 in the series which began in 1933. There has been one tie and there were two such games each year from 1959 through 1962.

The full house crowd of 51,000 which will see Tuesday's game will be almost twice as many as witnessed the two previous games here. The 1938 and 1953 games were played in the Reds' old Crosley Field.

The 1938 game was notable for several things.

It marked the last All-Star game appearance for the New York Yankees' great Lou Gehrig. After eight games of the 1939 season, Gehrig dropped out of the Yankee line-up because of the illness that subsequently caused his death.

It also saw the Reds' Johnny Vander Meer as the starting and winning pitcher for the National League.

Less than a month before Vander Meer pitched consecutive no-hit games—a feat never performed before nor since. The losing pitcher was the Yankees' Lefty Gomez.

It came during the years the American League dominated the All-Star competition, a situation that since has been reversed in favor of the National League.

Vander Meer, Bill Lee of the Chicago Cubs and Mace Brown of the Pittsburgh Pirates completely stifled the American League's famous sluggers in that 1938 game.

Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey of the Yankees, Jimmy Foxx of the Philadelphia Athletics and Rudy York of the Detroit Tigers had a field day hitting balls out of the park in practice but, as Ken Murphy, then of the Richmond Ind. Paladium-Tem, wrote—"when the game started they wilted."

Two of the other players were Leo Durocher, now manager of the Chicago Cubs, and Joe Cronin, now president of the American League.

The National League in 1953 won its fourth straight All-Star game but still trailed the American Leaguers, 12-8, in the series.

Warren Spahn of the Braves, newly transplanted from Boston to Milwaukee, was the winning pitcher and the loser was Allie Reynolds of the Yankees.

Ted Kluszewski, first baseman for the Cincinnati Reds, was the leading National Leaguer in a vote of the fans for a starting position.

He now is a coach for the Reds.

Pee Wee Reese of the then Brooklyn Dodgers and now a television broadcaster of Cincinnati games, went 2-for-4 and drove in two of the National League's five runs.

Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals also was 2-for-4 and Enos Slaughter of the Cards 2-for-3. Minnie Minoos of the Chicago White Sox went 2-for-4 for the American Leaguers.

One of the pitchers for the American League was Satchel Paige, whose age then was just as much of a mystery as it is now. He wasn't much of a mystery to the National League hitters as he allowed two runs.

Robin Roberts and Curt Simmons of Philadelphia, Murry Dickson of the St. Louis Cardinals and Spahn allowed the American Leaguers only five hits, three in the ninth for the Americans' only run.

And they had Billy Goodman of the Red Sox hitting .329 and Mickey Mantle of the Yankees at .341.

The National League had Red Schoendienst of the Cardinals—manager of the Red Birds' manager—

Mets Down Cards, Open Up Lead

By BEN THOMAS
Associated Press Sports Writer
Attention National League pitchers! Jim Ray Hart's back from the minors and the once-fearful hitting star is again wielding a big bat.

Hart, recalled from Phoenix earlier in the week when Jim Davenport retired, staged a slightly delayed celebration Wednesday night by driving in six runs in one inning to equal a 59-year-old National League record as the San Francisco Giants bombed the Atlanta Braves 13-0.

Troubled most of last year by a shoulder injury, Hart was shipped to Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League by the Giants during spring training. He appeared in a San Francisco uniform for the first time in the 1970 campaign Tuesday night and was hitless in four appearances. He more than made up for it Wednesday night.

Elsewhere in the National League, the New York Mets opened up a 1½-game East Division lead over Pittsburgh by beating St. Louis 7-5 as the Pirates fell 2-0 to Philadelphia; San Diego defeated Cincinnati 3-1, Los Angeles edged Houston 6-3 and the Chicago Cubs split a twin bill with Montreal, winning the first game 5-1 and dropping the nightcap 5-4.

In the American League, it was Cleveland 6, Washington 5; Baltimore 9, New York 8; Detroit 3, Boston 2; Chicago 2, Milwaukee 1; Minnesota 8, Oakland 1, and California 3, Kansas City 2.

"It's great to be back," chorled Hart after his Wednesday night performance, which included a single, double, triple and home run in five at bats.

"Six RBI — that's a week's work in one inning," said Atlanta slugger Hank Aaron and Luman Harris, the Braves' manager, added: "You mean the record he tied was set in 1911?"

It's hard to believe that anyone could get six RBIs in one inning with the dead ball they played with back then.

The NL inning record for RBI was set May 13, 1911, by Fred C. Merkle of the old New York Giants. The major league record is seven, by Edward Cartwright of St. Louis in 1890 when the second loop was known as the American Association.

Since the formation of the American League in 1901, six players have driven in six runs in a single inning. Hart is only the second NL player to achieve the feat.

Hart had seven RBI for the evening. He had an RBI single in the third and his six RBI featured the Giants' 11-run fifth. He homered with two on in his first trip to the plate in the inning and when he came back up again later in the inning he smashed a bases-loaded triple.

The Mets, in beating the Cards, racked up their sixth straight victory, longest winning streak for the defending world champs this season. Rookie Ken Singleton's third-inning homer with two on put the Mets out front to stay after St. Louis had gone ahead 3-0. Carl Taylor homered for the Cards.

Deron Johnson's ninth-inning homer with one on broke up a scoreless pitching duel between Philadelphia's Rick Wise and Pittsburgh's Steve Blass. It was Johnson's 16th clout of the season and the fourth off Blass. Wise also yielded four hits.

Cincinnati's four-game victory skein was snapped by the Padres but the Reds still maintain an 8½-game West Division lead. San Diego's runs all came in the third with Clarence Gaston and Ollie Brown hitting run scoring singles and Steve Huntz scoring on a Cincinnati error.

The Dodgers exploded for five runs in the ninth to beat Atlanta with Maury Wills' pinch double driving in a pair. The Cubs' first-game victory over Montreal was highlighted by two-run homers by Ron Santo and Billy Williams.

Stan Parris in Last Year at Henderson

Stan Parris, senior defensive safety for Henderson, will begin his final campaign with the

"Reddies" this fall.

Parris has been placed on the All-AIC team for the past three seasons and led his team in pass interceptions. He is 6 feet, 4 inches, weighs 190 pounds, and is considered by his coaches as a definite pro prospect and All-American candidate.

Stan will also serve as team captain this season.

He and his wife, the former Charlotte Wilson of Little Rock, have a month-old son. Parris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Olen Parris of Hope.

Cassius Clay—Nowhere to Fight

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — For Cassius Clay, nothing has changed — and nothing is the same.

The former heavyweight champion of the world came to Charleston to fight again for the first time in 2½ years. The only sparring he did, however, was with youngsters who had thronged outside his motel.

It was the old Cassius Clay who strode into the street where it looked like a truck filled with children had overturned and spilled its load.

He picked up boys, pulled little girls' pigtails and kissed babies. Nothing had changed.

But then, nothing was the same.

Not so long ago perhaps he would have lashed back at the white politicians who voted to prevent his sparring exhibition at Charleston 4,000-seat County Auditorium.

The County Council voted Tuesday to withdraw a permit for holding the fight there.

Instead of firing back, Clay merely shrugged his shoulders, said so long to the kids, stepped on a plane and left town.

Before he left he chatted with a group of newspaper reporters. They asked him why he came to Charleston.

"I just did it for the underprivileged black children to try and encourage them into sports and give them something to do."

"Maybe an image like myself could have helped them. I just wanted to come down and help these black people, but the politicians wouldn't allow it."

Clay was to have fought two three-round matches and the money was to have gone to help underprivileged children.

Minnesota, Cleveland Winners

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
Oakland took a dose of Minnesota muscle but it wasn't nearly as hard to swallow as the turn-about trick Cleveland pulled on Washington.

A homer and three singles by Tony Oliva—who often does that sort of thing—led Minnesota to an 8-6 victory over Oakland Wednesday night, completing a three-game series sweep. Unpleasant for the A's, but not unreasonable.

Buddy Bradford—who doesn't usually do that sort of thing—walloped a grand slam homer in the eighth inning that brought Cleveland from behind for a 6-5 victory over the Senators and unexpected too.

Elsewhere in the American League Wednesday night, Baltimore roared from behind to beat New York 9-8, Chicago nipped Milwaukee 2-1, Detroit shaded Boston 3-2 and California edged Kansas City 3-2.

In the National League, New York whipped St. Louis 7-5, Philadelphia shut out Pittsburgh 2-0, San Francisco blanked Atlanta 13-0, San Diego topped Cincinnati 3-1, Los Angeles edged Houston 6-5 and Chicago split a doubleheader with Montreal, winning 5-1 before losing 5-4.

Oliva, who increased his batting average to .332, third best in the American League, provided a major part of the Minnesota's offense against Oakland and the Twins needed all the runs they got.

The A's knocked out Jim Perry with a ninth inning rally that included Dave Duncan's three-run homer. But Ron Perranoski came out of the bullpen to nail down Perry's 13th victory.

Oliva had three singles; a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly, driving in four runs and scoring two. Rich Reese also homered for the Twins.

Bradford, who carried a .189 batting average and two homers into Cleveland's game against Washington, exploded for his first career grand slam in the eighth inning as the Indians wiped out a 5-1 Senators' lead.

The slam followed an RBI-single by Tony Horton that narrowed the lead to 5-2 and knocked out starter George Brunet. Darold Knowles relieved and walked Chuck Hinton, setting the stage for Bradford's blast.

It was Cleveland's fourth straight victory over the Senators.

Frank Robinson's second homer of the game started a three-run Baltimore rally in the ninth inning that moved the Orioles past the Yankees. Don Buford, who had opened the game with a homer for the Birds, capped the winning rally with a two-out, two-run single after reliever Lindy McDaniel had struck out two straight batters with the bases-loaded and none out.

The Yankees had come from behind to take the lead on eighth inning homers by John Ellis and Curt Blefary. Thurman Munson also homered for New York and Boog Powell connected for Baltimore.

Detroit took over second place in the AL East with Gates Brown's ninth inning pinch sacrifice fly driving in the winning run, after two walks and a wild pitch got pinch runner Elliott Maddox around to third.

The Tigers had taken a 2-1 lead in the eighth on rookie Ken Szolkewicz' homer but Billy Conigliaro's RBI single tied it for Boston in the ninth. Willie Horton also homered for the Tigers.

Chicago pushed two runs across in the eighth inning to break a scoreless tie as Tommy John outpitched Milwaukee's Al Downing.

Downing's error on a play at first base allowed Bobby Knop

BATTING — Jim Hart, Giants, hit for the cycle with a single, double, triple and homer, driving in seven runs—six of them in an 11-run fifth inning when he tied and homered leading San Francisco to a 13-0 romp over Atlanta.

PITCHING — Rick Wise, Philadelphia, pitched a four-hitter and beat Pittsburgh 2-0.

THE THRILL'S THE SAME but the trophies are getting heavier after 20 years of winning. Veteran Ernie Derr of Keokuk, Iowa, has won more stock car races than any other driver, plus 10 national championships.

Dog Caddies for Her Golfing Master, and Shakes Up Opponents

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — look out golfers, Pat Pattison and his dog may be in your foursome. And you can kiss that score good-bye.

Kari, a black German Shepherd, is Pattison's caddy. Rigged with a special harness, she can pull Pattison's bags over the roughest of courses.

True, Kari's not like a fine human caddy. The dog can't whisper advice about a tricky lie, nor even give the inside dope on a dog leg to the right. But she can demoralize Pattison's opponents, it need be.

For example, on a recent outing, Pattison winked to a newsmen, then wiggled his finger at his side. Kari took an ever so slight half-step to the right, then froze.

The move would have rattled Arnold Palmer. Said one observer: "Seen out of the corner of a putter's eye, it might just as well have been a water buffalo dropping to his knees."

"We don't do that very much," says Pattison, a 57-year-old carpenter with an 8 handicap. "Only when I need to win a match."

The 10-year-old dog, whose ancestry might include just a trace of collie, also shags balls to score with the first run and Carlos May's RBI-single produced the second. The Brewers nicked John for a run in the bottom of the eighth but fell one short.

Jim Fregosi beat a throw to the plate on Ken McMullen's bouncer delivering California's winning run against Kansas City in the ninth inning after the Royals had rallied for two runs in the top of the ninth to tie the score.

Rookie Tom Bradley, making his first major league appearance had KC shut out on three hits until he was knocked out in the ninth. Reliever Ken Tatum came on and gained credit for the victory.

Frenchmen Outsprint Americans

By JOHN VINOCUR
PARIS (AP) — Sometimes an Englishman, occasionally a Kenyan, rationally a Russian — but a Frenchman can run faster than an American?

It happened on the red track at Colombes Olympic Stadium Wednesday night not once, but three times. French boys, who supposedly spend half their youth riding bicycles like the Tour de France racers, sprinted like crazy. They beat the best U.S. runners in three short distance events they were never supposed to win and took a 56-50 lead in the first half of a two-day track meet.

A crowd of about 12,000 screamed itself silly as Jean-Claude Nallet won the 440-meter hurdles in 48.6 seconds, the world's best time this year. Alain Sarteur grabbed the 100 meters and a French relay team took the 4x100 meters.

The French won four other events — the long jump, the 3,000 meter steeplechase, the shot put and the 5,000 meters — leaving the Americans with only three victories and a coach who said:

"If that performance doesn't get their adrenalin flowing, I don't want to think about what will happen."

The coach, Leroy Walker, figured his team should come back tonight with a string of wins. "But more problems wouldn't completely shock me," he said. "Before last night I figured we could be down by two points. You really have to give the French credit."

Both the Americans, who considered them a warmup for meets with West Germany and the Soviet Union over the next fortnight, and the French press who gave them little chance, underestimated the French runners.

No Relievers on All-Star Hurling Staff

BOSTON (AP) — No apologies were absolutely necessary, but Manager Earl Weaver felt one was owed American League relief stars after picking a staff of nine full-fledged starters for the All-Star Game with the National League next Tuesday night at Cincinnati.

Weaver, who managed the Baltimore Orioles to the pennant in 1969, explained his decision Wednesday as the staff was announced by league President Joe Cronin.

He said he did not name any relievers because "if we selected one, there would be five or six that are qualified to be placed in the same category."

He cited Eddie Watt and Pete Richert of the Orioles, Ron Perano of the Minnesota Twins, Darold Knowles of Washington, Ken Tatum of California and Andy McDaniel and Jack Aker of New York.

Knowing that those relievers can do, Weaver said, "made me realize that an All-Star staff of completely relievers could be picked."

"Consequently," he added, I made up my mind that the staff would consist of starters whose records taken away from their respective clubs would lower the clubs considerably in the standings."

Weaver surprised many observers by picking his three top stars — southpaws Dave McNally and Mike Cuellar and right hander Jim Palmer. He also tabbed Fritz Peterson and Mel Stottlemyre of the Yankees, Sam McDowell of Cleveland, Jim Hunter of Oakland, Clyde Wright of the Angels and Jim Perry of the Twins.

The staff has five left handers and four righties, with an overall record of 100-47 this season when chosen. Peterson, McDowell and Wright are the other southpaws with McNally and Cuellar.

Although he has an extra southpaw, Weaver probably will start a right hander if he decides to go with the percentage. The National League's starting line up has only one left handed batter, switch hitting Don Kessinger of the Chicago Cubs.

Pro Gridders Turn Up on Golf Circuit

By BOB GREENE
Associated Press Sports Writer
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jesse Whitenton and Zeke Bratkowski looked out of place without shoulder pads Wednesday as they teed off in the pro-am warm up for the $110,000 Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

Whitenton, of El Paso, Tex., is a tour regular while Bratkowski was one of 150 shank-and-slice amateurs who pay to play a round with the pros.

Whitenton is a former defensive back with the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League while Bratkowski, now a Packer coach, once was the Green Bay back-up quarterback.

Although a sentimental favorite, Whitenton isn't figured to finish high among the leaders this week.

The pre-tournament nods go to defending champion Ken Still of Tacoma, Wash., red-hot Kermit Zarley, also of Tacoma, who won the Canadian Open last week, Dave Stockton of Westlake, Calif., winner here in 1968, and Steve Eichstaedt, the younger who surprised everybody by finishing second in the Cleveland Open.

Eichstaedt is a native of Miami, Fla., but now plays out of North Shore Country Club, the site of the G.M.O.

A surprise entry, and one that is welcomed with the field decimated by the British open as it has been, is Ron Cerrudo, the colorful Californian from Napa. The 22-year-old Cerrudo has been sidelined for two months with an ailing back and there had been some talk that he was considering dropping from the tour.

The four day, 72-hole Greater Milwaukee Open is short on big names and long on rabbits — those pros who play 18 holes on Monday in an effort to fill the 144-man field.

Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Doug Sanders, Gary Player and Tony Jacklin are playing in the British Open at St. Andrews, Scotland.

Juan "Chi Chi" Rodriguez of Puerto Rico, a gallery favorite said it was a good thing Nicklaus and Palmer are not entered in the G.M.O.

"Perhaps Jack and Arnie are lucky they aren't here," he laughed. "I'm in the mood to beat them and they don't like to lose."

The 7,110-yard course lived up to its reputation Wednesday as high winds created problems for any golfer who put any height on his ball. Intermittent showers, sometimes heavy, also caused play to be slowed.

"I notice the wind is still here," Zarley said. "I think it rained last year, but there was still a lot of wind."

Chi Chi also remembered the elements from last year when rain drenched Saturday's play. "The course looks just as good as usual," Chi Chi said. "Long and windy."

Although the crowds were audibly pleased with the play of the pros in the pro-am, the biggest galleries were reserved for Bratkowski and Packer quarter-back Bart Starr.

Haynie Tops Lady Golf Cash Winners

ATLANTA (AP) — Sandra Haynie has replaced Kathy Whitworth on the Ladies' Professional Golf Association tour money list.

Miss Haynie captured the lead on the strength of the $2,000 she won last week by tying for the runnerup spot in the U.S. Women's Open.

The Dallas native has $19,911 in earnings this year, as compared to $19,298 for Miss Whitworth of Richardson, Tex.

Carol Mann, of Cincinnati, is in third place with $18,645, and Shirley Englehorn of Palm Desert, Calif., is fourth with $17,114.

Winning the Open netted Donna Caponi $5,000 and a jump from 11th to fifth on the money list. However, her $13,058 still trails the totals of the front four.

The other golfers in the top 10 are: Sandra Palmer, Fort Worth, Tex., $13,005; Marilyn Smith, Jupiter, Fla., $11,745; Mary Mills, Handsboro, Miss., $11,238; Betsy Rawls, Spartanburg, S.C., $10,744; and Jo Ann Prentice, Birmingham, Ala., $10,027.

Rain Cools Jacklin at St. Andrews

By THOMAS A. REEDY
Associated Press Sports Writer
ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Tony Jacklin, heading for an awe-inspiring record until rain stopped play, paid the penalty today for having to cool off overnight and completed his first round of the 1970 British Open Golf Championship with a disappointing 67.

Defending champion Jacklin of England had gone out in a record 29 Wednesday and was eight under par at the 14th, where his ball stopped under a bush.

Up at dawn today along with several dozen others who were halted by the savage cloudburst, Jacklin took up where he left off but then shot a one-over-par 6. He dropped two more shots at the 16th and 17th and his five-under-par 67 was two shots off the pace-setting 65 by his countryman, Neil Coles.

"If I said what I really felt, you couldn't print it," Jacklin said ruefully. "It was a different game today and very difficult to pick up when you are eight under (par)."

The unfinished delegations teed off in steady rain that plagued the 6,951-yard Old Course with casual water.

An occasional clap of thunder served as ominous reminders of Wednesday's night's jungle-like storm.

The second 18-hole round started immediately after completion of the first, which meant a long hard day for some — provided, of course, the weather becomes no worse.

The Royal Air Force Station nearby gloomily forecast persistent rain, clearing up late in the afternoon.

Roberto de Vicenzo, former British Open champion, finished with a one-under-par 71. The Argentine was one of the players whose round was interrupted by rain Wednesday.

He said, "I know it was a difficult decision for the Royal and Ancient to make. But I think the whole round should have been rubbed out."

"This is the best British Open field in the history of the championship. Many of us have traveled thousands of miles."

"I don't want to have a handicap of this type. I firmly believe the decision to let the round stand when rain stopped play was no good."

Lee Trevino of El Paso, Tex., completed his round for a 32-36-68 and supported De Vicenzo's claim that the whole round Wednesday should have been wiped out.

"We should all have started from scratch today," he said.

"We have not played the same golf course. A few holes yesterday and a few more today. Is that a true record of the round?"

"Now I've completed my round and I've got to hang around for about three hours before I go out again."

At the outset of the second round, the position was:

- 65 Coles
- 66 Tommy Horton, England
- 67 Jacklin, Florentino Molina, Spain
- Harold Henning, South Africa
- John Richardson, England
- Maurice Bembridge, England
- 68 Peter Thomson, Australia
- Arnold Palmer, Brian Huggett, Wales
- Jack Nicklaus, Doug Sanders, Trevino, Aaron and Guy Wolstenholme, Australia

Terry Stewart to Jets

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The New York Jets have announced that Arkansas' All-Southwest Conference defensive back Terry Stewart has signed a two year, bonus contract.

Stewart would not say how much money was involved but commented that it was enough to encourage him to play professional football for "a couple of years" rather than go to graduate school.

Stewart was an honor graduate with a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering.

He said the Jets told him they plan to try him at free safety and possibly at cornerback. He reports to the Jets' training camp Tuesday.

Miss Boyle, who is in "Come Live With Me," bares her breasts during one scene. No arrests were made at Wednesday night's performance. The board viewed the play Tuesday and made the ruling.

Never before had so many clustered this much below St. Andrews par 72. The record-smashing assault of Wednesday put in jeopardy still another record, Kol Nagle's winning 278-10 under par—set here 10 years ago.

Intrepid Is Favored Over Valiant

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Intrepid has an edge over Valiant according to an interested observer—Charles E. Morgan of St. Petersburg, Fla., skipper of Heritage.

Heritage has been beaten by both Intrepid and Valiant in the current observation trials for America's Cup defense candidates, and Morgan said Wednesday.

"I think Intrepid's the fastest boat here and she'll beat Valiant in the kind of weather we sailed in today."

Valiant, skippered by Bob McCullough of Riverside, Conn., which was to sail against Intrepid today, beat Weatherly in excellent sailing weather Wednesday. Intrepid, skippered by Bill Ficker of Newport Beach, Calif., beat Heritage.

The other race today pitted Heritage against Weatherly.

B. Devereux Barker III, chairman of the New York Yacht Club's Race Committee, said Wednesday Heritage was disqualified for a starting line foul in Tuesday's race with Valiant. Valiant had won the race.

day.

The vote, which surprised aides of Sen. Ralph T. Smith, R-Ill., who introduced the amendment, highlighted action on the pending agricultural appropriations bill for fiscal 1971.

But the Senate also voted $500 million to enable expansion of the food-stamp program for needy families and increased loan and grant funds to help rural communities build water treatment and sewerage facilities.

The subsidy curb is expected to win acceptance in the House which twice has passed similar measures only to see them killed in conference with the Senate.

The Senate vote was criticized by the National Farmers Organization and by Farm Bureau leaders.

"This will be detrimental to the program," said Edgar Hall of Mt. Vernon, Ill., president of NFO. "It's going to destroy a great deal of participation."

Roland Nelson, president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau in Mead, commented, "I do not believe a limitation is going to answer any of the problems that we have on the farm."

Many Farm Bureau chapters advocate phasing out the support program over a five-year period.

Smith estimated the limit would save between $350 million and $400 million yearly. Only about 12,000 of the 2.5 million farmers registered under the program now receive payments greater than $20,000, he said.

The average payment is $1,400 a year, he said, and a third of all farmers registered get less than $500.

Smith said he hopes enactment of the measure will serve as a dike against the continuing consolidation of the nation's farm lands into large units, and the resulting decrease in family farming.

In another section of the bill, Sen. George M. McGovern, D-S.D., was successful in increasing the proposed food-stamp appropriation from $1.25 billion to $1.75 billion.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said the half-billion increase would allow the program to reach about 12 million needy persons, twice as many as are enrolled now.

Actress 'Bare' for 2nd Night

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — For a second night in a row, actress Barbara Boyle performed a scene at the Olde West Dinner Theatre here Wednesday that the Little Rock Censor Board has ruled against.

Miss Boyle, who is in "Come Live With Me," bares her breasts during one scene.

No arrests were made at Wednesday night's performance. The board viewed the play Tuesday and made the ruling.

Adults Are Short on Book Learning, Long on Evaluating Life

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Initial results of a nationwide survey of educational achievement indicates that adults are generally not as well versed as young people in textbook knowledge but have a greater capacity to understand their experiences.

The survey, known as the National Assessment of Educational Progress, was being studied today at the fourth annual conference of the Education Commission of the States—ECS.

Partial results of the multimillion-dollar study, which involved nearly 100,000 persons, were made public Tuesday after five years of planning and research.

Although the first results of the assessment were concerned only with citizenship, writing and science, future topics will include art, mathematics, music, literature, reading, social studies and vocational education.

Some of the highlights in the area of science were:

—Half the 9-year-olds and 98 per cent of the 13-year-olds know that a human baby comes from its mother's body.

—Fifty-three per cent of the 13-year-olds and 41 per cent of the adults believe that an ocean fish fossil found in a mountain rock was carried there by a great flood.

—Only 29 per cent of the 17-year-olds and 55 per cent of the adults know when, during the menstrual cycle, ovulation occurs.

The Negro Community

By ESTER HICKS
Phone 777-4678 or 4474

Let's Reflect:
"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches"—Solomon.

The interdenominational Ministerial Alliance announces that the mass Visitation Service which was scheduled to be held at the Lonake Baptist Church Sunday nite, at 7:30 has been postponed and re-scheduled for August. This action is in response to a request by the Washington District of the C. M. E. Church, due to the imminence of their Annual Conference Session.

James A. Williams of the United States Air Defense Center, Ft. Bliss, Texas, spent the 4th of July with relatives and friends. A picnic was shared by the Grays at the home of Mrs. Robbie Moore. Williams is the grandson of Mrs. Willow McFadden and Mrs. Mattie L. Dockery and the great grandson of Mrs. Annie A. Lewis.

Spending the 4th of July weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Willie Brandon were: Mrs. Elnora Brandon, Seattle, Washington; sisters of Mr. Brandon; Mr. and Mrs. Willie Lee Johnson and daughters Vanessa, Francine and Dianna of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, nephew and cousins to the Brandons; Mrs. Emma Pugh of Weeds of California; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wesson and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Brady of Nashville, Jessie Montgomery of Yakima, Washington, and Mrs. Lou Stewart of Texarkana.

A family picnic raised the get-together out of the status of the ordinary and placed the sociological climate into the perspective of unique intimacy. Other relatives of the city participating in the fish-fry picnic were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Willie James Brandon and Richard Brandon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ellis have returned from a trip to Wichita, Kansas, where they visited their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Silas Ellis and family. Their account of the trip—"beautiful."

Usher Board of Rising Star Missionary Baptist Church will have a special program Sunday, July 12, at 2:30 p.m. Rev. R. L. Shepard, pastor of Unity Baptist Church of Lewisville will bring the message. Public is invited. W. M. Martin pastor.

U. S. DISCLOSES

merce Department. It would include the Environmental Science Services Administration; Interior's ocean resources and commercial fishing activities; the Great Lakes survey, now under the Army Corps of Engineers, and oceanographic functions carried out by the National Science Foundation, the Navy and Coast Guard.

This would leave the Interior Department with its traditional role of developing natural resources.

A presidential commission headed by Roy L. Ash, president of Union Industries, had been set up on the verge of announcing the view that environmental protection and resource management should be combined under one department.

China Key to Asia, Says Secy. Rogers

By SPENCER DAVIS
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Communist China is the "key to the future of Indochina," Secretary of State William P. Rogers said today, and if Peking would "talk sensibly" about a settlement for the war, the Nixon administration thinks it "could work out a peaceful settlement very quickly."

Rogers also said in a television interview with NHK, the Japan Broadcasting Corp., that the U.S. military presence in Asia would be unnecessary if "Communist China would ever stop its belligerent attitude toward its neighbors."

Rogers did not indicate whether Washington has made any approaches to the Chinese concerning Indochina.

But he did say: "We have done everything we can to improve our relations with China. They have given some indication they might like to improve relations, but so far the progress has been very slow."

The secretary of state said he believes Thailand, Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam, "cooperating and working together with other Asian nations, will be able to maintain their independence."

"And we think, too," he went on, "that Cambodia—because of its feeling of nationalism, because it has been invaded by the North Vietnamese—has a good chance of retaining a non-Communist government."

Asked how the withdrawal of 150,000 U.S. troops from South Vietnam by next May would affect the security of that part of Southeast Asia, Rogers said the South Vietnamese government now has about 1,034,000 troops, "well armed, well equipped, well trained, and we think that those troops, together with our air power and the remaining American troops and the troops from Thailand and South Korea, will be able to maintain the security of South Vietnam."

In a speech earlier today, Rogers said the United States will not allow differences with Japan in the commercial field to cause a rupture between the two countries.

"Japan has to play a part in the security of this part of the world," he told the U.S. Embassy staff. "Japan is in a position in the years ahead to play an important part in security, not only here, but in the world generally."

"The fact that we have had a breakdown in textile negotiations will not affect the revision of Okinawa to Japan."

Rogers discussed Japanese-American disputes over trade with Prime Minister Eisaku Sato and other Japanese officials Wednesday. He said the United States is going to compete from time to time with Japan because both nations are great industrial powers.

Asks Advice on Maxwell Case

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — U.S. District Judge J. Smith Henley has sent a letter to Atty. Gen. Joe Purcell and attorney George Howard Jr. asking for their views on the future handling of the case of William L. Maxwell.

Maxwell, a Hot Springs Negro, has been sentenced to death for the rape of a white woman in 1962 in Hot Springs. His case recently was held unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court.

In a letter to Purcell and Howard, who is Maxwell's attorney, Henley said the Supreme Court "at least intimated strongly that the death sentence imposed on Maxwell cannot constitutionally stand" but did not finally decide "the question."

The Supreme Court remanded the matter back to District Court for further proceedings. "The Supreme Court refers to possible Arkansas remedies, and I am wondering whether any avenue for relief is now available to Maxwell under the Criminal Procedure rules of the Supreme Court of Arkansas," Henley said.

AP Correspondent Revisits Separation Line of 2 Vietnams

By DANIEL De LUCE

The huge crimson banner with a gold star still flies at the 17th Parallel dividing Vietnam. Just as we remembered seeing it during a visit to North Vietnam in February.

The steel flagpole, 113 feet high, towers on the north bank of the Ben Hai River, where shell-pocked coastal Highway No. 1 ends at a broken bridge.

Five months ago, we stood at the base of the flagpole with North Vietnamese escorts. My wife took color photos. We heard artillery fire in the south. A jet flew past.

Men and women in conical hats worked in the neat rice fields of the northern portion of the Demilitarized Zone, where many of the craters from years of American bombing had been filled in.

We were told the North Vietnamese farmers felt reassured

Treating of Drug Addicts Hindered

—Says Export

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A pioneer in the use of methadone to treat heroin addicts charges that proposed federal regulations governing community methadone programs contain key provisions that are unreasonable and unworkable.

Dr. Vincent P. Dole of Rockefeller University said the proposed regulations were put together by the government "with essentially no consultation with knowledgeable people in the field."

Dr. Dole's charges, made in an interview, mark the newest controversy in the stormy history of methadone, a narcotic being used increasingly in many community programs across the nation to help hard-core drug addicts kick the habit.

In a methadone program, the addict is given a dose of methadone each day. Because it is a narcotic, and is itself addictive, the patient remains addicted, but he does not get "high" because methadone is given orally rather than injected.

Although he is giving up heroin, the addict does not suffer withdrawal symptoms because of the methadone. In addition, the methadone blocks the effects of any heroin the addict might take furtively, preventing him from getting a heroin "high."

All this, the argument runs, allows the addict to break the heroin habit, eliminates the need for criminal activity to pay for the expensive habit while leaving him capable of rehabilitation.

"Sorry, Miss, no offense intended, but as a matter of policy we never serve unescorted ladies at the bar."

"How many—just one? This is our rush hour. I'm afraid there will be a half-hour wait for singles."

"There was an old maid who lived in a shoe. She had no children—she knew what to do."

"You'll love this guy, Beulah. A real intellectual. He once taught swimming at Harvard, and now he owns three pools of his own."

"How about baby-sitting for us tonight, Beulah? I know you rarely do anything on Fridays except wash your hair, and you can do that over here."

"Well, if you don't want to see mine, why don't we go to your apartment instead and look at your etchings?"

U.S. Discloses Fight Plan on Pollution

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With signs pointing toward creation of two new agencies, the White House unveils today a plan for reorganizing the federal government's environmental protection program.

Informed sources said President Nixon would propose the two agencies—one, under the President, to enforce protection of the environment, and the other, within the Commerce Department, to oversee environmental planning and management programs.

Such an approach would run contrary to the recommendation of Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel, who has suggested his department should have authority over natural resources and the environment.

Hickel contends environmental protection and resource management cannot be separated—that they go together like ham and eggs.

Sources said the President's plan would take the fight against air pollution from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and place it under a new "Environmental Protection Administration."

The new agency, operating under guidance of the White House, also would take over the fight against water pollution—now headed by Interior—as well as some radiation safety functions from the Atomic Energy Commission, sources said.

The second new agency, the "National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration," would be placed in the Com-

Ban on Lead Gasoline May Be Scuttled

By JOHN S. LANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's move to ban lead from gasoline would be stopped by last-minute wording inserted in the House-passed Clean Air Bill, say administration sources.

Language tightening the conditions under which lead could be outlawed was introduced by Rep. David Satterfield, D-Va., whose district includes the nation's two largest producers of lead for gas.

The measure passed last month gives the Department of Health, Education and Welfare power to prohibit fuel ingredients that endanger public health—but only after making findings based on "relevant medical and scientific evidence."

Officials at HEW's National Air Pollution Control Administration have told Congress that under this wording they don't believe they could justify banning lead in gasoline.

"When you look at the wording, it's clear that Congress has no intention of permitting us to take a liberal interpretation of the law and ban lead," says an HEW source. The Senate has yet to act on the bill.

The Nixon administration proposal did not put the burden of proof on HEW. It allowed the secretary to set standards for lead based on information obtained from fuel manufacturers "or any other information available to him."

Such information includes a growing body of evidence that lead is accumulating in higher than normal amounts in human bodies and in the food chain. What effect this has on humans over the long term is not well established. But many scientists are urging that use of lead be curtailed before any disastrous effects become known.

Sources at HEW say lead likely would be phased out of auto fuels over a five-year period if the agency were allowed to base its decision on such information.

The more restrictive wording was offered during a closed subcommittee hearing by Satterfield, whose Richmond district includes the headquarters of the Ethyl Corp., and a huge facility of Dupont, the two biggest makers of tetraethyl lead for gas.

Satterfield rejects any suggestion he weakened the wording to accommodate powerful interests in his district.

But he says, "The fact they are in my district put me in closer contact with them so I understood some aspects that wouldn't have been explored otherwise."

County Beats Blood Quota

Haskell Jones, Hempstead county blood program chairman, wrote the Red Cross Headquarters and requested an audit on the year's blood program. He received this reply:

Dear Mr. Jones: This is in answer to your letter of June 19 which we received today. Hempstead County gave 592 units of blood during fiscal year July 1, 1969, through June 30, 1970, which is 82 units over your quota. Congratulations to you and your community for a very successful year in the blood program.

This marks the first time in many years that Hempstead County has exceeded the quota. There have been times when the county gave less than 50 per cent of what they used and went in danger of losing the program as recently as January, 1969. Only four visits are scheduled for fiscal 1971, with two two-day visits and two one-day visits. The next visit of the Bloodmobile will be Monday, August 17, at First Presbyterian Church, 12 noon to 6:00 p.m. The quota for that visit will be 110 pints. The next visit will be a two-day stay at the Red River Vocational Technical School, on Monday and Tuesday, November 9 and 10. The two day quota will be 220 pints.

friend Jim told me to phone you the next time I was in town. "This is your own mother talking, Beulah. Frankly, I don't think it is physically safe or emotionally wise for a young lady your age to be living alone."

"Well, I guess you still haven't given up hope, have you, Beulah? If you had, you'd have probably bought yourself a cat or a parakeet."

"Maybe she's got a secret goal—such as trying to stop the human population explosion all by herself."

"Charlie and I have had another terrible fight over how much I spent over our budget, Beulah. Mind if I trot over and sleep on your sofa tonight?"

You'll love this guy, Beulah. I almost married him myself once.

"I'd propose to you myself, Beulah, but you know how narrow-minded my wife is."

"She and the kids left yesterday to spend two weeks with her folks, so I just thought I'd call you up and see if—"

Man Vanishes From Hot Springs; No Clue 6 Years Later

By EDNA LEE HOWE
Hot Springs Sentinel - Record

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — It is almost inconceivable that a person could register at a hotel in the very heart of Hot Springs, receive his room key, and then vanish.

However, it did happen, and six years later there is still not a single clue to the disappearance of 85-year-old John F. Wallace, a resident of Valley Acres, rural subdivision six miles northwest of Hot Springs off Cedar Glades Road.

The mystery continues to prey on the mind of the State Police officer who searched so diligently, but without success, to locate Wallace.

"It's hard to believe that such a thing could happen in a city of nearly 40,000 inhabitants with an annual visitor population of several hundred thousand, and the case continues to bug me," says Glen H. Minton. No longer a member of the Arkansas State Police, Minton is now security manager for the Dierkds Division of the Weyerhaeuser Corp.

$20,000 Limit Put on Farm Payments

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unexpected turnabout, the Senate has voted a $20,000 annual limit on the amount a farmer can be paid for not growing crops. The proposal is given a good chance of becoming law.

Chief targets of the move are lush co-subsidy payments to large corporations, banks, state governments and other giant land holders who have received individual payments of more than $4 million for keeping land out of production.

Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., who last year received $146,000 in subsidy payments on his Sunflower County, Miss., cotton plantation, voted against the measure which curbs payments to producers of wheat, cotton and feed grains.

Just a year ago the Senate refused, 53 to 34, to approve an identical subsidy limit. Spurred by arguments the program has strangled the small family farm it was supposed to help and angered city dwellers, the Senate approved it, 40 to 35, Wednesday.

Factional Fighting Enlivens Opening of UN Youth Meeting

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The opening of the World Youth Assembly at U.N. headquarters today was enlivened by a Puerto Rican factional fight, Soviet attempts to bar Nationalist Chinese, South Koreans and South Vietnamese, and a Yippie threat to wreck everything.

Before the nine-day meeting's first session in the General Assembly hall, Soviet participants signaled that they would demand the exclusion of Chinese Nationalist, South Korean and South Vietnamese participants because no Chinese Communist, North Korea or North Vietnamese were attending. Hanoi and Pyongyang turned down invitations to send representatives, and Peking ignored them.

Two members of the University of Puerto Rico student council demanded that they be seated in place of the official Puerto Rican participant, who was named by a government-sponsored committee.

The Yippie threat came to light Wednesday when a bushy-haired young man and girl identifying themselves as Isaac and Lynn Yippi tried to register as representatives of the Woodstock Nation.

They said they represented the Youth International Party—the Yippies—and the young man said he was the party's finance

Boeing Gets Badly Needed Contract

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing Co. has won a major defense contract to test a new airborne warning system, giving a big boost to the ailing aerospace giant and to the depressed Seattle area.

The contract, announced Wednesday, is for the Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS), which envisions a fleet of flying command posts to provide control of air-to-air and air-to-ground battles and to detect enemy bombers and missiles.

The losing bidder was McDonnell Douglas Corp., of Long Beach, Calif.

The initial award is $170 million. If Boeing proves this system, the contract would amount to more than $2 billion in the next five years.

More important locally, it was the first big contract won by Seattle-based Boeing in a long time. The company has been a bridesmaid several times in recent bidding, including the loss of the lucrative B1 bomber to North American Rockwell Corp. last month.

Douglas Graves, manager of Boeing's AWACS branch, said "the biggest benefit is a tremendous improvement in morale in the company and in the area."

Boeing, the Northwest's biggest employer, has been in the doldrums for two years. Engine trouble, unexpected high costs and lagging sales orders caused by a decline in air travel have plagued the company's 747 jumbo jet. Failure to win other major contracts added to the woes.

The firm has been forced to cut employment in the Seattle area from a peak of 101,400 in July 1968, to 55,400 at present. More than 25,000 have been laid off in 1970, with another 10,000 to go by the end of the year.

The Seattle-area unemployment level is about 10 per cent, twice the national average, housing starts are down about 40 per cent from a year ago, auto sales are down 35 per cent, and the hotel business is down 25 per cent.

minister. They said they lived on New York's Lower East Side and that their "slaves names" were Haber and Borland.

The couple had trouble getting through to assembly officials and finally were told to come back today. Isaac said that if he did not get in, "we're going to wreck this conference."

On the eve of the opening, 628 participants had registered from 110 U.N. member countries, several nonmember countries, some colonies and many international organizations.

The best known is Greek composer Mikis Theodorakis, who wrote the music for the films "Z" and "Zorba the Greek" and was recently released from political detention by the Greek military dictatorship. He was admitted as a participant although he is 44—the conference is supposed to be for persons no older than 25.

Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York held a reception for the delegates Wednesday night on the lawn of Gracie Mansion, his official residence. He told them he hoped their deliberations would "make people understand that peace is the one subject of young people the world over," regardless of country or political system.

About 75 participants from 13 Arab countries boycotted the reception, accusing the mayor of an "adamant pro-Zionist stand."

Wreckage of Commander's 'Copter Seen

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — Military sources said late today the wreckage of a missing helicopter with Maj. Gen. George W. Casey, commander of the 1st Air Cavalry division, and six other Americans aboard has been located by searchers.

The sources said the helicopter apparently had crashed into a mountain Tuesday morning. There was no immediate confirmation that anyone had survived the crash, they added.

The wreckage of the UH1 helicopter which Casey himself was piloting, was spotted from the air by crewmen of one of the more than 60 aircraft that had taken part in a massive search.

As the search was being conducted, the U.S. Command announced that a total of 61 Americans were killed in action last week, the lowest weekly total in 3½ years.

Informants said the location of the helicopter wreckage was being withheld because no ground troops had as yet reached the scene to inspect it and look for survivors.

The U.S. Command had no comment on the reports of the wreckage being found, saying only that the search and rescue operation was discontinued at nightfall and was to be resumed Friday morning.

The sources said there was no indication that enemy action was involved in the crash of the helicopter, which Casey, 48, of North Scituate, Mass., was flying to visit wounded members of his division at a medical facility in South Vietnam.

The location of the hospital, like other details concerning the site of the crash, were withheld for security reasons while the search continued.

Gen. Casey's UH1 Huey helicopter was last heard from at 10:10 a.m. Tuesday, and searchers have found neither the craft nor its occupants, the command said. There was no indication whether enemy action was believed responsible for the disappearance.

The 48-year-old general, whose wife and five children live in North Scituate, Mass., was flying to a military medical facility to visit wounded members of his division. The area in which his aircraft is believed to have gone down was not made public for security reasons.

Six U.S. generals were killed in action earlier in the war, including two earlier this year.

The command's weekly casualty summary reported 463 Americans wounded last week in addition to 61 killed. These figures brought the total American casualties in action that have been reported in the war to 42,919 killed, 282,966 wounded and 1,442 missing or captured.

It was the lowest weekly death toll since Dec. 3, 1966.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported 371 government troops killed and 1,027 wounded in action last week, bringing government casualties since Jan. 1, 1960, to 110,175 killed and 231,631 wounded.

The two allied commands claimed 1,395 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed last week, and 655,145 since Jan. 1, 1961.

The U.S. Command also released American casualty totals for the eight-week Cambodian operation, reporting 354 Americans killed and 1,689 wounded between April 29 and June 30.

Auto Accident on E. Third

Hope Police Dept. investigated an accident at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday on East Third St. where a car driven by Olin D. Purcell of Hope hit the rear end of a car driven by Belinda Gail Burke of Emmet.

Minor damage resulted. No charges were filed by City Officer Howard Milam.

Also, police report that Thomas E. Youngblood, 32, of Hope, was arrested July 7 at 1:00 p.m. and charged with altering a check. He is being held in Hempstead county jail.

Sgt. Carl Ward and City Officers Howard Milam and Bill Halton made the arrest.

Security in Layoff New Union Point

By CHARLES CAIN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers have added a new item—the financial security of laid-off members—to a list of priority items to be taken up with the industry next week in new contract talks.

Leonard Woodcock, newly elected president of the UAW, told a Wednesday news conference he was hopeful new wage pacts could be worked out without a strike.

"We fully intend to have a settlement with one of the Big Three—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—by Sept. 14 and if not, we will have to take some other action," he said.

Contracts with the Big Three run out Sept. 15. The contract with American Motors runs out a month later.

In a wide-ranging discussion of topics, Woodcock said the automakers overcharge for their cars, that dividends have risen twice as fast as payrolls since 1947, and that automakers can win the battle against foreign imports and still meet wage demands if they will make the effort.

Woodcock repeated the union's top three demands:

—1. Optional retirement on a $500-a-month minimum pension after 30 years service regardless of age.

—2. Elimination of a limit on cost-of-living wage clauses.

—3. A substantial wage increase.

He also declared that "financial support for our supplemental unemployment benefits program is grossly inadequate."

The SUB fund was created primarily to provide benefits to workers to supplement unemployment compensation when plants are shut down, such as at model changeover periods.

Workers with two years seniority receive 95 per cent seniority in salary in SUB and unemployment compensation benefits during periods they are laid off.

Woodcock said that the General Motors SUB plan in Canada already has been bankrupt.

Opening lead—♦ 2

Here is another Sonny and Jackie hand on the subject of Blackwood.

Jackie's one-spade opening was made because she never opened one no-trump. She did open four-card spade suits. Sonny's two-diamond response was typical Moysi-an match-point strategy. Jackie was going to play the hand somewhere in spades. Sonny wanted to stop a possible disastrous diamond opening.

Jackie's two no-trump re-bid shook Sonny a trifle. Most husbands do tremble a trifle when their wife bids no-trump and Sonny was a real trembler. Still, Sonny assumed that it showed extra values and was off to ward a slam. He bid four no-trump and five no-trump. When Jackie showed just one king, Sonny decided to settle for a small spade slam on the theory that Jackie might well have a weakish four-card spade suit.

Then came mutiny on the good ship Blackwood. Jackie bid six no-trump!

As anyone can see by looking at all the cards, six no-trump is the maximum spot, provided a diamond isn't opened, but a diamond was opened. See if you can figure the reason why the diamond was led?

The last was rather an unfair question.

It seems that the bidding had taken some time and East proceeded to lead the queen of hearts out of turn.

Sonny might well have put down the dummy quickly but he asked, "Do you know your rights?"

Jackie asked, "Can I call a lead?" and, upon being informed that she could, promptly said to West, "Lead a diamond."

Make a Dessert That's Divine

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Cherry lovers will enjoy a special fruit, ice cream and gelatin dessert. It takes little time to prepare, is very decorative to serve and tastes flippy or divine.

A combination of canned sweet cherries and fresh orange sections adds a tang that true dessert eaters appreciate. Chill in individual glasses or merely follow recipe but chill all ingredients in an attractive serving dish.

FLUFFY CHERRY FLIPS

- 1 (1-pound) can or jar dark or light sweet cherries
- 1 (3-ounce) package cherry gelatin
- 1/4 cup hot cherry syrup
- 1/4 cup port wine or grape juice
- 1 (10-ounce) bottle ginger ale
- 1 cup halved orange sections
- 1 (3-ounce) package lemon gelatin
- 1 cup hot water
- 1 pint vanilla ice cream
- 1/4 cup silvered almonds, toasted

If cherries are unpitted, drain and pit, reserving syrup. Dissolve cherry gelatin in 1/2-cup hot cherry syrup. Add port wine or grape juice. Carefully add ginger ale, pouring down side of bowl to preserve fizz. Chill until partially thickened. Fold in orange sections and spoon into dessert glasses, filling each half-full. Chill. Dissolve lemon gelatin in hot water. Stir in remaining cherry syrup (about 1/2-cup). Spoon vanilla ice cream gradually into gelatin. Fold in cherries and almonds. Chill until thickened enough to hold shape. Spoon over cherry gelatin, piling high in glasses for pretty effect. Refrigerate at least 30 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Burping? Maybe What You're Eating Too Much of Is—Air

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bothered by indigestion, excessive belching or that bloated feeling? If so, it may be because you may be eating too much air.

That's right—air. Researchers report that swallowed air may account for 75 percent of the cases of "bloat and belch," a problem more definitely known as "gas in the gastrointestinal tract."

That's one of the most common symptoms of the many varieties of abdominal distress which plague an estimated 100 million to 150 million Americans at one time or another.

Scientists have tongue-twisting titles for the tummy troubles—such as aerophagia, borborygmus and dyspepsia. But, by whatever name, Americans spend a king's ransom seeking relief—$437.4 million annually for medicines alone.

Gum chewers, especially those who chew as a kind of nervous habit, are likely to swallow abnormal quantities of air, researchers say.

Heavy smokers of all kinds—cigarette, pipe or cigar—are also among champion air-eaters. So are non-stop conversationalists; and fast, gulpy eaters. Finally, their ranks include drinkers of carbonated beverages.

Other contributors to gaseous distress include eating certain foods—such as onions, cooked cabbage, radishes and cucumbers; individual allergies to some types of food; over-eating, and eating while under emotional stress.

Whatever the varied causes of functional indigestion, Americans are now spending annually, according to the publication "Drug Topics," —$99.3 million for "antacids"—pills, tablets, capsules, gums, lozenges, powders and liquids—many of them obtainable without prescription in drug stores and supermarkets.

—$87.7 million for "effervescent" substances designed both to dispell the belly-bubbles and relieve pain and that morning-after-like feeling.

They're also spending: —$190.2 million for laxatives and other "elimination" aids. —$60.2 million for diarrhea remedies.

"I don't know of anything new or startling in the medicine line that has come along lately to treat uncomplicated, functional indigestion," said Dr. Irving Brick, acting chief of the gastroenterology department at Georgetown University hospital and school of medicine.

He said doctors still depend largely on traditional anti-acid compounds—plus medical "de-lurgents." The latter have been developed in more recent years to aid the expulsion of trapped gas.

"As for the antacids," Dr. Brick says, "the oldtime baking soda remedy is probably as effective as many of the highly touted modern antacids."

Basically, they all have the same ingredients—such as calcium or aluminum hydroxides, or an antacid, and magnesium salts to prevent constipation. Dr. Brick and Dr. Martin Durkin, another Georgetown gastroenterologist, say that nearly everyone has transient episodes of indigestion.

They add that in most chronic cases a psychosomatic emotional problem is probably the basis of symptoms.

"The most important thing for people in the general population to remember," said Brick, "is this:

"If a person has persistent abdominal symptoms of any kind—whether he thinks it's indigestion or constipation—he should put himself in the hands of a doctor who can perform X-ray and other diagnostic tests."

Only in that way, he said, can it be determined whether the trouble is a functional one—or whether it's a serious one, possibly requiring surgery or more extensive medical treatment.

What about other research? Brick said, probably the most potentially important advance of recent years—in the indigestion field at least—was the determination by a British scientist of some of the functions of an intestinal hormone called "secretin."

Its main role appears to be that of stimulating the stomach to produce hydrochloric acid for the normal digestive process.

Now, researchers in various parts of the world—including Dr. Martin Grossman of the University of California at Los Angeles—are further exploring the powers of secretin, with this concept in mind.

It might be possible—in the event of excess hydrochloric acid and its "gut gas" fellow-travelers—to offset it more efficiently by artificially suppressing the hormone that normally triggers the acid production.

Grossman said in an interview that other investigators have found that certain common beverages—such as citrus-fruit juices, carbonated and cola drinks, as well as alcohol and coffee—yield acids that can contribute to functional heartburn and other digestive distress.

The Californian is also a world pioneer in pin-pointing the actual mechanism of heartburn which was once thought exclusively due to excess of hydrochloric acid.

Grossman found, instead, that the characteristic pain of heartburn—so-called because it can mimic the pain of a heart-attack—is due to a reflux, or backing up, of food into the esophagus from the stomach, with or without the coincidence of excess hydrochloric acid.

"urkin, soon to leave Georgetown to join the University of Missouri medical faculty, says a form of heartburn can also be caused by direct irritation of the esophagus by certain foods and liquids enroute to the stomach.

"Hot spicy foods and hot peppers can do it," he said, "and so can alcohol. Indeed, I knew one poor guy who can't drink champagne without getting heartburn of this type."

Environment Planning Necessary

By BILL SIMMONS

Associated Press Writer
LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Adrian Williamson, director of the Arkansas Industrial Development Commission, says that any community's industrial development thrust should be accompanied by an effort in environmental planning.

The environmental studies would have to lead to plans for services and "aesthetic things that make life enjoyable," he said.

Williamson said inadequate environmental planning is the root of many problems plaguing the nations industrial centers, where too often development has taken place in haphazard fashion.

"Too often the enthusiasm which accompanies the industrial development thrust—the 'more the merrier' numbers approach—eclipses a realistic view of conditions created," he wrote, broaching the topic in the June issue of the AIDC magazine.

"Serious air and water pollution, poorly planned suburbs and overcrowded urban areas are but a few of the complications resulting from haphazard industrial growth," his editorial said.

Williamson said the logical point for beginning comprehensive planning is at the community and county level.

"This obviously would be an approach to fundamental planning, a program looking 10 to 20 years down the road," he said. "We have seen what has happened in many, if not most, of the areas of the United States due to lack of planning."

He pointed to traffic congestion, inadequate services and other ills of areas that developed without advance planning.

"We in Arkansas have a broad opportunity to avoid the problems, to plan intelligently and creatively to avoid experiencing the errors of other cities," Williamson said.

The cost would not be great, he said, and the long-term results likely would make the planning proposal—as opposed to unguided development—more economical.

"After all, a community is going to have to provide the services its citizens demand, whether it planned for the demand or not," he said.

His proposal he said, is "just pie in the sky conversation unless people really come to an awareness of the need for orderly development, of the need for areas of residential expansion to be clearly and thoughtfully demarcated, and the same for industrial expansion, an adequate facilities for smooth traffic flow."

The beginnings of some of the problems due to inadequate planning are evident in some parts of Arkansas, Williamson said.

He mentioned that area containing Fayetteville, Springdale and Rogers. "They're clogged right now to the point where they're strangling themselves," Williamson said.

Williamson also said that the Interstate 30 link between Little Rock and Benton, due to unplanned development, is an incipient "strip city," and that the "strip city" tag already could be accurately applied to some city thoroughfares, such as Asher Avenue in Little Rock.

Environment Vital to Industry

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller told a hearing of the Southern Regional Environmental Conservation Council here Wednesday that ecological decay will become irreversible unless Southern states tackle their environmental problems without delay.

The hearing was the sixth in a series of 20 to be held by the council, which was created by the Southern Governor's Conference of which Rockefeller is chairman.

"We cannot destroy nature for the sake of short-range benefits without ultimately destroying ourselves," Rockefeller said.

The council is studying the need and feasibility of a multi-state compact under which members could combat pollution.

Rockefeller said the South had been highly competitive in efforts to industrialize. Leaders of Southern states have spent years developing scientific incentives for industry, he said.

"What we must face now is that an interstate competition which results in destruction of the environment is a course of self-destruction," Rockefeller said.

He said that for years Southern states had abrogated many responsibilities principally because few had the money or personnel to attack problems effectively. He said, however, that recently the state have begun to regain initiative in devising concepts of managing their resources.

The governor said the South must focus its efforts on establishing regional goals to include the needs and desires of the people without environmental degradation.

Dr. C. D. Dowell, head of the Department of Recreation and Parks Administration at Arkansas Tech at Russellville, told the hearing that industrialization in the South had come

FOR MANAGER FORM

Editor The Star: This has to do with our present form of city government vs. mayor-council form.

I want to say to all my friends in the City of Hope that we are faced with what I think to be the most far reaching and important issue ever to come before us.

I am asking all of you (Especially those of you who work and labor for a living), to help in this matter by coming out next Tuesday July 14 and vote to keep our present form of City Government.

We have been faced with many issues since I have known you; most of you know that in all my private and public life I have stood up for the working class of people; it is my life, it is my nature.

Now believe me, as I told one of my colored friends the other day I know both sides of this matter and have made a study of each side, and in my humble and more swiftly than had been anticipated. He said communities "have been caught in the maelstrom of rapid expansion, population implosion, and deteriorating eco systems."

"While waiving large amounts of cash for capital improvements and the promise of a bright future for the local economy, industry blithely wrecks havoc on the local environment to suit its particular need," Dowell said.

He said true, corrective measures should be undertaken by industry.

sincere opinion the present form of government is much, much better than the mayor-council form.

So the vote you cast next Tuesday will have a profound and lasting effect on our City. Sincerely,

Dismissal of Sarver Refused

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP) — Two sons of a Crittenden County man who was allegedly murdered in 1968 appeared before the state Board of Correction Wednesday and demanded the resignation of Correction Commissioner C. Robert Sarver.

Emmett D. Bardwell of Gilmore (Crittenden County) and W. B. Bardwell Jr. of Holly Springs, Miss., said they wanted Sarver fired because "he released the murderer of our father."

The Bardwells were protesting the emergency furlough given to William Earl Goudy, 34, who was sentenced to life for the slaying of W. B. Bardwell Sr., 76, in 1968.

On May 28, Goudy, a trusty, was given a three-day emergency furlough authorized by Sarver because a woman identified as Goudy's wife telephoned the prison and said that Goudy's son was being taken to a hospital.

Goudy failed to return on May 31 and Sarver said it had been learned the call was a hoax.

W. B. Bardwell said the case was not an isolated one and "I think its time for a change in administration."

The Bardwells said if the board refused to fire Sarver, they would appeal to Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller for Sarver's dismissal.

After hearing the Bardwells' request the board apologized for Goudy's release and admitted that Sarver had made a mistake in granting the furlough.

The board, however, stressed that the emergency furlough system would not be abolished because it was a "moral booster." The board also agreed that inmates should be given the opportunity to visit with relatives who are ill or dying.

In other action, the board authorized architects to finalize plans and ask for bids on several projects at the prisons including two vocational-technical training buildings at Cummins, new water and sewer lines at Tucker, and the renovation of the Cummins laundry and kitchen.

Newspaper Bill to Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill granting an antitrust exemption to joint newspaper arrangements in 22 cities is headed for a conference committee.

The bill, which grew out of a Supreme Court ruling affecting two newspapers in Tucson, Ariz., passed the House 292 to 87 Wednesday. The conference committee will work out minor differences between the House bill and the version which passed the Senate earlier.

The Supreme Court held that the two Tucson newspapers violated antitrust laws by combining their mechanical operations even though maintaining separate editorial staffs. The bill would overturn that ruling.

While protecting joint operating agreements in 22 cities, the bill would make it more difficult for newspapers to enter into such agreements in the future.

Sponsors said the legislation is needed to preserve competing editorial voices in cities where one newspaper might fail if it had to set up its own business and mechanical operations.

Rep. Clarence J. Brown, R-Ohio, a newspaper publisher, said preserving editorial competition was not the issue. "The issue is money—profits," he said. "If they fail, so be it."

Other opponents argued that the bill would legalize such practices as profit-pooling and price-fixing.

Legal Bars to Integration Futile Effort

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — In August 1958, with segregation fever running high, former Gov. Orval E. Faubus called the General Assembly into special session to erect statutory barriers to school integration. History shows now that the event was an exercise in legal futility.

In that session, the lawmakers created 17 laws aimed at thwarting school desegregation. Since then, the courts have dismantled the barrier, piece by piece, and only a shred remains.

The statutes in question were widely attributed to Faubus although the sponsors technically were legislators. Bruce Bennett, who was attorney general at the time, also was the source of several bills.

Of the 17 acts, four were appropriations measures virtually immune to challenge, and only two had even minor consequence on school integration issues — one appropriated money for the governor's office, the other for the attorney general's office. The appropriations were designed to finance actions aimed at contesting attempts to integrate schools.

Of the 13 other measures, one amended tax law and one added an exemption to a prohibition against illegal or unauthorized practice of law.

The 11 remaining statutes were the core of the legislature's plan of resistance to school desegregation. They were Acts 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16 and 17.

Nine of them are no longer in effect — one because it was repealed three years later, the other eight because the courts have held them to be unconstitutional.

The first to fall was Act 4, which gave the governor power to close any public school on any one of three possible grounds:

— "to maintain the peace,"
— "to avoid obedience to any court commanding integration,"
— "to avoid any inefficiency that might result from integration."

The bill was signed into law by Faubus on Sept. 12, 1958, which was the day on which the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a decision prohibiting a 2½-year delay in desegregation at Little Rock.

Faubus moved the same day to close Little Rock schools and, as also provided by Act 4, called a special election on the question of racial integration of "all schools in the district."

In the court test that ensued, the Arkansas Supreme Court ruled that the act was constitutional, but the U.S. Supreme Court axed the law before it had lived a full year.

Said Justice Felix Frankfurter in a concurring opinion on June 4, 1959: "We are asked to hold that the illegal, forcible interference by the state with the continuation of what the constitution commands and the consequences in disorder that it entrained, should be recognized as justification" for undoing school desegregation orders.

Frankfurter's judgment was: "To yield to such a claim would be to enshrine official lawlessness, and lawlessness if not checked is the precursor of anarchy."

Act 5, which provided for withholding of some public aid from any school closed under Act 4, was struck down by the same decision because of its dependency upon the defective statute.

The Arkansas Supreme Court, in a later case, also upheld the constitutionality of Act 10, only to be overruled again by the nation's highest tribunal.

Act 10 stipulated that, as a condition of employment, public school personnel must file a sworn statement listing every organization to which they had belonged or contributed in the preceding five years.

Justice Potter Stewart, writing for the U.S. Supreme Court majority, said in voiding Act 10: "The statute's comprehensive interference with associational freedom goes far beyond what might be justified in the exercise of the state's legitimate inquiry into the fitness and competency of its teachers."

That decision came on Dec. 12, 1960. Act 10 had survived for two years and three months, to the day, and had died as a consequence of the first challenge of its constitutionality.

In 1961, the legislature repealed Act 9, which had established a system for the recall of school board members. The for some clue that might solve the mystery and I still find myself asking questions of persons I think might be of some help, but to no avail," he said. "There was nothing in the entire investigation at the time to indicate four pay."

Wallace, a bachelor, lived alone and was considered to be in good physical condition.

It was on the early evening of Aug. 6, 1964 that Wallace registered at the Milwaukee Hotel and then dropped from sight, leaving not a single trace.

A. K. Williams, a neighbor, who reported Wallace missing on Aug. 8, had brought him to Hot Springs the morning of Aug. 6, as he often did, Minton said. Wallace desired to make a deposit of three checks at the First Federal Savings, but, since the institution was not open, Williams said he dropped Wallace off on the Bath House Row to get breakfast then walk the short distance to First Federal where, in fact, he did deposit $162.84 later in the day.

Williams never saw Wallace again, he told the trooper, but when he discovered his neighbor had not returned home, he notified authorities. Kenneth McKinney, then a deputy in the sheriff's office and now the chief deputy, joined Minton in the investigation.

Wallace, Minton said, frequently rode home from town with his grocer, George Linnington whose store is located on Whittington Avenue. Linnington said he had seen Wallace the afternoon of Aug. 6 when he came to the store, but the store was closed and Linnington told Minton he did not speak to Wallace. It was then, Minton theorized, that Wallace went back downtown for the night at the Milwaukee.

One small fact puzzled the officer. Wallace listed Alaska as his home address when registering. At one time, years ago, he was known to have lived near Juneau, but a check with friends there revealed that he did not return to Alaska after leaving the state.

On the afternoon of Aug. 5, the day prior to his disappearance, Minton recalled, Wallace came to Hot Springs to deposit his checks, but found First Federal closed for the day. On that occasion, another neighbor reported seeing him walking along Cedar Glade road toward his home. Still another neighbor and his wife, also seeing him, picked him up and took him home.

Wallace's account at First Federal Savings revealed regular deposits to his account, which totaled approximately $6,000 but there had been no withdrawals since May of 1964, some three months before his disappearance.

Minton believes that Wallace, after receiving his key to the hotel room, probably did go to the room for a short time since the hotel maid reported that the bed clothing was rumpled and then he wandered onto West Mountain which rises back of the hotel. It was known that Wallace liked to walk in the woods and sometimes did in the area around his home.

But Minton, McKinney and National Park rangers, who aided in the extensive search of the steep, densely thicketed east face of the mountain, conceded it would be next to impossible for anyone, much less a man of Wallace's age to scale even a portion of it.

A check with the bus terminal also proved fruitless.

Minton is confident that Wallace did not leave town. All transportation outlets, in addition to the bus station, were checked. Wallace was described as being 5-foot-8, weighing 135 to 140 with close-cropped gray hair and wearing a black suit with white shirt, no tie and black hat. He had come to Hot Springs from Bismarck about 1961. A check with a friend, the Bismarck postmistress, revealed that, as far as she knew, Wallace had not been to the small community in many months prior to his disappearance.

Minton also conducted an extensive search of the wooded area near Wallace's home, but again without success.

There was no sign of a struggle around the home or in the downtown hotel room to indicate that Wallace had been the victim of an attack.

"There was just nothing," said Minton. "In all my more than 20 years as a State Police officer (he retired in 1967) I've never heard of another case quite like this one. There just simply is no trace of the man. He literally dropped from sight after registering at the hotel."

Wallace's estate has been closed now with his two nieces as beneficiaries.

Total value of the estate, including real and personal property was $17,946.

Faubus Says Credit Is Due Him

By ROBERT SHAW
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Former Gov. Orval E. Faubus said today that he doubted seriously that the Welfare Department would have granted welfare raises if he had not been a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Faubus told a news conference that the $6-a-month raises might have been granted in order to cut into what he said was his strength among welfare recipients, their friends and families.

The former governor said "this group of people, their friends and relatives are very inclined toward me politically."

He declined to say that Tuesday's announcement of the welfare increases by Commissioner Len Blaylock was politically inspired, but said, "I think we all know when it was announced they hoped for political benefits."

Faubus said that when he was governor, charges had been made against his administration that he timed welfare increases for political reasons. Faubus said the charges against him did not appear very effective.

James Malone Jr. of Lonoke, another Democratic candidate for governor, Wednesday took credit for forcing the Rockefeller administration to grant welfare increases because of his pledge to raise payments if he were elected.

Faubus said he and Malone "think a lot alike on some things since he received a lot of training under me." Malone worked in some of Faubus' earlier campaigns.

On another subject, Faubus said he did not think gambling would be a major issue in the campaign but that he thought it was of interest to voters.

Some Democratic candidates have said Faubus' entrance into the race made gambling an issue since open, illegal gambling flourished at Hot Springs in his administration until he cracked down in 1964.

Faubus said that no illegal gambling would be permitted to resume in Hot Springs if he is elected to a seventh term.

He gave Rockefeller credit for "effectively squelching" attempts by Hot Springs interests to resume gambling after Rockefeller took office in 1967.

Faubus said Rockefeller was the "principal target" of the eight Democratic candidates for governor because "no one doubts that he will not be nominated" in the Republican primary.

The former governor said Rockefeller would be a formidable candidate and "that is why each of the candidates is aiming his campaign efforts toward him."

He said many persons thought the Democratic candidates should be as "gentle" to each other as possible so that after the primary all factions of the party could pull together to beat the GOP nominee.
